

HENRY B. SELL

... for aiding Italy ...

Italy Honors Hearst Editor

Henry B. Sell, editor of Town & Country, a Hearst magazine, is one of three Americans to be honored by a gold medal in recognition of "outstanding contributions this past year to this country's knowledge of Italy and its people."

The medals were presented by Ambassador Leonardo Vitetti, permanent representative of Italy to the United Nations, to Sell, and to Andrea Ragusa, owner and director of Vanni Bookstores, and G. E. Kidder Smith, author of "Italy Builds."

This is the second annual award of the medals and similar awards will be made each year by E.N.I.T. (Ente Nazionale Per Le Industrie Turistiche) known in the United States as the Italian State Tourist Office.

Sell's citation was "to the editor of the magazine who has issued one or more important articles on Italy."
